

From Notre-Dame of Paris . . .

Spend a day at Oxford, the university where St. Edmund Campion--the 'Flower of Oxford'--had been an academic shooting star before becoming a Catholic 'criminal' and one of the most wanted men in England.

In London, Visit St. Thomas More's actual cell as well as the place where he was martyred.

In Paris, visit the sites of the French Revolution, including the actual cell of the martyr, Marie Antoinette, the Catholic Queen even most Catholics still mock.

. . . to Notre-Dame of Chartres

The Tower of London. See the awful place where the greatest Catholics in England went to die

Walk the footsteps of St. Edmund Campion on his way to execution. Visit Stonor Park, Henley-on-Thames, where the great Jesuit kept his secret printing presses. And Lyford Grange, the home where Campion was arrested.

The Slipper Chapel: Attend Mass here and go to confession, before removing your shoes and walking the "holy mile" into Walsingham--one of the greatest Marian shrines of Medieval Christendom, where Our Lady appeared nearly one thousand years ago to request a perpetual memorial to the Annunciation.

Three days walking across France, praying, singing, hearing Mass--finding your Catholic soul again.
